

CURRICULUM VITAE

D. Robert LADD
Professor of Linguistics, Emeritus
School of Philosophy, Psychology and Language Sciences
University of Edinburgh

Date of birth: 5 March 1947

Citizenship: American and British

University education and degrees:

1970-72 and 1975-78: Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, USA
M.A. in Linguistics, August 1972; Ph.D. in Linguistics, May 1978

1964-68: Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island, USA
A.B. magna cum laude, with Highest Honours in Linguistics, June 1968

Career summary (most recent first):

Since retirement:

- October-November 2014: Visiting Professor, Institut für Vergleichende Sprachwissenschaft, University of Zurich.
- October 2011: Formally named Professor Emeritus, University of Edinburgh.
- August 2011-July 2020: Honorary Professorial Fellow, University of Edinburgh; some continued involvement with teaching and supervision.

University of Edinburgh:

October 1997 – July 2011: Professor of Linguistics, University of Edinburgh

- August 2008-June 2010: Acting Head of School of Philosophy, Psychology and Language Sciences, University of Edinburgh.
- August 2000-July 2003: Head of Department/Subject Area, Theoretical and Applied Linguistics, University of Edinburgh.
- March-July 2000: Visiting Professor, Dept. of Cognitive Science, Johns Hopkins University.

October 1989 - September 1997: Reader, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Edinburgh

- Summer 1997: member of staff of Linguistic Society of America summer institute, Cornell University.
- Summer 1995: Visiting scholar, Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics, Nijmegen, The Netherlands.
- March-August 1994: Van Houten Fellow (visiting researcher), Institute for Perception Research (IPO), Eindhoven, The Netherlands.

January 1985 - September 1989: Lecturer, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Edinburgh.

Earlier appointments since graduation:

- Autumn 1984: Visiting Assistant Professor, Dept. of Modern Languages and Linguistics, Cornell University, USA
- 1983-84: Research Fellow, Laboratory of Experimental Psychology, University of Sussex
- 1981-83: Research Associate, Dept. of Psychology, University of Giessen, Germany
- 1980-81: Visiting Assistant Professor, Dept. of Modern Languages, Bucknell University, USA; also Visiting Lecturer, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Pennsylvania, USA
- 1979-80: Acting Assistant Professor, Dept. of Modern Languages and Linguistics, Cornell University, USA
- 1978-79: Lector (Fulbright Exchange Scholar), English Department, University of Cluj, Romania
- 1977-78: Instructor, Dept. of Modern Languages and Linguistics, Cornell University, USA
- 1972-73: Lektor, English Department, University of Heidelberg, Germany
- 1968-70: Military service, U. S. Army

Major research interests and research leadership:

From the beginning of my doctoral research in 1975 until about fifteen years ago, my work centred on intonation and prosody. My doctoral thesis on intonational meaning was the source of the now standard terms 'broad focus' and 'narrow focus', and my 1981 paper on negative questions has recently inspired considerable discussion in formal semantics. Since the early 1980s, though, my prosody research has dealt primarily with phonological and phonetic questions. In the early 1990s I was an outside consultant in the discussions that led to the formulation of the original ToBI standard for prosodic transcription of English. A specific focus of my own work has been the search for evidence of the existence of localised targets in pitch contours, including the questions of how such targets are scaled relative to the speaker's voice range and how they are temporally coordinated with the segmental string. With regard to the last of these, my work with Amalia Arvaniti and others established the notion of 'segmental anchoring', which was a focus of research in the first decade of this century. My book Intonational Phonology rapidly became a key text on intonation after the first edition appeared in 1996, and since the publication of the second edition in 2008 it is now, according to Google Scholar, the single most widely cited source in the field. A Chinese translation (语调音系学) appeared in summer 2022.

More generally, throughout my career I have been active in promoting the approach known as 'Laboratory Phonology', which aims to make instrumental and experimental data an integral part of theoretical work on phonology and to treat theoretical issues in phonology as a basis for experimental research in phonetics and psycholinguistics. In the late 1980s I played a role in establishing the Laboratory Phonology conference series and ensuring that it became international. I was elected as the first president of the Association for Laboratory Phonology when it was founded in 2010 and served in this role until July 2014.

Since about 2000 my research has increasingly dealt with broader questions about phonology and about language more generally. My book Simultaneous Structure in Phonology (2014) brings together several strands of this work with my lifetime work on prosody and intonation. I have also developed several specific topics in the past two decades, mostly in collaboration with various colleagues. For example, two AHRC-funded projects on Dinka (a language of South Sudan), in collaboration with my Edinburgh colleague Bert Remijsen and others (2005-2012), have led to publications on topics well beyond the specific focus of the grants. The first project was the basis of a discussion note in Language (2009) on the implications of Dinka noun morphology for Pinker's 'dual-route' notion of irregularity; with Mirella Blum, a student of Bert Remijsen's, I revisited this topic in 2020 and the resulting reconsideration of Dinka irregularity appeared in Journal of African Languages and Linguistics. (A further collaborative paper with Blum on Dinka noun morphology is in preparation.) The second project has led me into research on musical text-setting in tone languages, which was the subject of an AHRC Early Career Fellowship (2015-16) held by my Edinburgh colleague James Kirby, with me as named mentor. Another issue – the problem of “quasi-contrastive” distinctions – lies behind a couple of other recent collaborative publications, one with Peggy Renwick of the University of Georgia on Italian mid vowels and one with Stephan Schmid of the University of Zurich on aspirated stops in Swiss German. The latter study is part of an ongoing interest in segmental influences on fundamental frequency that includes further collaborative work with James Kirby (e.g. JASA 2016, doi: 10.1121/1.4962445) and with my Zurich colleagues (in preparation).

In 2007 Dan Dediu and I published a paper in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS) showing that the uneven geographical distribution of different variants of two human genes involved in brain development is mathematically correlated with the uneven geographical distribution of tone languages. We proposed that the relationship is mediated by a ‘cognitive bias’ attributable to the genetic differences, which affects the transmission of language over many generations (more detail can be found here). Subsequently Patrick Wong published a study directly motivated by our paper (Wong et al., PLoS-1, 2012), reporting response differences to linguistic pitch that are correlated with one of the two genes we discussed. Our own follow-up work focused on individual differences in pitch perception, including a study published in Journal of Experimental Psychology: Human Perception and Performance in 2013. From 2012 to 2017 Dediu directed a five-year Dutch Research Organisation (NWO) “Vidi” postdoctoral grant entitled “The influence of genetic biases on the evolution, universal properties and diversity of speech and language” at the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics in Nijmegen; he is now a Research Professor at ICREA at the University of Barcelona. Most recently Wong has published another study whose results are much more directly in line with the original Dediu/Ladd proposal: we discuss the details in a paper we posted on PsyArXiv.

Honours and awards:

I was elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 2015 and a member of the Academia Europaea in 2016.

Large research grants:

1. ‘Pragmatic factors in the intonation of synthesised spoken dialogue’ (ESRC, November 1991-October 1993, £90k). Co-PI: Dr. Judy Delin.
2. ‘Discontinuities in the perception of intonational continua’ (ESRC, October 1993-September 1994, £23k). Rated Good in post-project evaluation.

3. 'Phonetic and phonological properties of tonal targets in Modern Greek intonation' (ESRC, July 1995-June 1997, £80k). Rated Outstanding in post-project evaluation. Co-PI: Dr. Amalia Arvaniti, University of Cyprus (now Radboud University, Nijmegen).

4. 'Alignment of Fundamental Frequency Targets in English and Dutch' (ESRC, February 1998-June 2001, £83k). Rated Outstanding in post-project evaluation. Main RA: Dr. Astrid Schepman (now University of Chester).

5. 'Stress in Nilotic: A Typological Challenge' (AHRC, September 2005-August 2008, £193k). Main RA: Dr. Bert Remijsen.

6. 'Simultaneous and Sequential Structure in Language' (Leverhulme Personal Research Fellowship, January 2007-June 2008, £16k).

7. 'Metre and Melody in Dinka Speech and Song' (AHRC, January 2009-March 2012, £450k). Part of the AHRC's 'Beyond Text' group of projects. Co-PIs Prof. Miriam Meyerhoff (now Oxford) and Dr. Angela Impey (SOAS); main RA: Dr. Bert Remijsen.

Teaching experience:

General: In Edinburgh my principal teaching responsibility was the core courses in phonology. I also designed and taught more general introductory and intermediate courses aimed primarily at students who do not intend to specialise in linguistics. Throughout my career I have also actively engaged undergraduates in research; half a dozen of my published papers had their origins in undergraduate Honours dissertations.

Specialised advanced courses: I taught graduate seminars and advanced undergraduate option courses on intonation and prosody at Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, and (for many years) Edinburgh. I have also taught specialised courses at the following workshops and institutes:

- two-week course on intonation, PILEI Summer Linguistics Institute, Cornell (Summer 1981)
- two-week course on intonation and prosody, 5th European Summer School on Logic, Language, and Information (ESSLLI), University of Lisbon (Summer 1993)
- three-day mini-course on intonation, Summer School on Language Description and Fieldwork, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Cologne (Summer 1993)
- one-week course on intonation for students in linguistics and languages, under a World Bank development grant to assist universities in the former Soviet-bloc countries of Central and Eastern Europe, Kossuth Technical University, Debrecen, Hungary (September 1995)
- three-week course on intonation at the Linguistic Society of America's biennial summer institute, Cornell University (Summer 1997)
- advanced workshop on prosody (five-day intensive course for French-speaking Swiss postgraduate and postdoctoral researchers in linguistics, psychology, and speech technology; I taught one full day of the five-day course), Champéry, Switzerland (March 1998)

- three-day mini-course on intonation, co-taught with Jacques Terken of Eindhoven University, University of Trondheim (September 1999)
- postgraduate/staff seminar on phonetic issues in phonology, Cognitive Science Department, Johns Hopkins University (March-May 2000)
- three-day mini-course on intonation and prosodic transcription of dialogue, Socrates exchange at University of Naples (March 2001)
- four-day mini-course on intonation and prosody for language fieldwork and language documentation, as part of the new Master's degree on documenting endangered languages, School of Oriental and African Studies, London (April 2004)
- half-day tutorial on phonetic aspects of prosody, Leipzig Workshop on Experimental Prosody Research, Leipzig (October 2004)
- half-day tutorial on phonetic aspects of prosody, Speech Science and Technology Conference, Melbourne (December 2010)
- week-long lecture series on prosody and phonology, Jinan University, Guangzhou (May 2013)
- five-week course on prosody and language design, University of Zurich (Autumn 2014)
- three-day mini-course on stress, accent and tone, ABRALIN summer institute, Niterói, Brazil (March 2017)
- four-lecture mini-course on stress, accent and tone, 12th Czech Summer School of Linguistics, Kroměříž, Czech Republic (August 2018)
- three-lecture mini-course on prosody, 7th Summer School of Contemporary Phonetics and Phonology, Beijing (online, July 2021; online, July 2022)

Postgraduate research supervision and examining:

I was primary supervisor or co-supervisor for 25 completed Edinburgh PhDs, and continue to have some limited involvement in research supervision. My past students include Haruo Kubozono (Ph.D. 1989; Director of the Department of Linguistic Theory and Structure at the National Institute for Japanese Language and Linguistics, Tokyo), Jim Scobbie (Ph.D. 1990; Professor of Speech Science at the Clinical Audiology, Speech and Language Research Centre at Queen Margaret University, Edinburgh), Ineke Mennen (Ph.D. 1999; Professor of Bilingualism at the University of Graz), and Sasha Calhoun (Ph.D. 2006; Senior Lecturer in Linguistics at Victoria University of Wellington). I also played an active role in supervising 5 PhD students outside Edinburgh on official or semi-official arrangements with their host universities (in Egypt, Brazil, the Netherlands, and Germany). I supervised approximately 20 MPhil and MSc dissertations.

I have served as external examiner for postgraduate research qualifications as follows:

- Doctorat d'État, University of Paris VII, March 1986
- D.Phil., University of York, May 1987
- Ph.D., University of Manchester, November 1987
- Ph.D., Lund University, December 1987
- Ph.D., University of Canterbury, New Zealand, January 1988
- Tesi di Perfezionamento, Scuola Normale Superiore, Pisa, March 1990
- Doctorat d'État, University of Provence (Aix), November 1991
- Ph.D., University of Manchester, January 1994

- Ph.D., University of Utrecht, January 1996
- Ph.D., University College London, April 1996
- Ph.D., Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics, Nijmegen, March 1998
- Ph.D., University of Lisbon, April 1999
- Ph.D., University of Melbourne, May 2002
- D.Phil., University of Cambridge, November 2003
- D.Phil., University of Cambridge, April 2004
- D.Phil., University of Saarbrücken, July 2004
- Ph.D., University of Manchester, November 2004
- Ph.D., University of Nijmegen, January 2005
- Habilitation à diriger les recherches, University of Toulouse, June 2005
- Habilitation à diriger les recherches, University of Paris III, June 2005
- Ph.D., University of Aston (Birmingham), September 2005
- Dr.Phil., University of Saarbrücken, October 2005
- D.Phil., Macquarie University (Sydney), December 2005
- Ph.D., School of Oriental and African Studies (London), May 2006
- Dr.Phil., University of Saarbrücken, June 2007
- Ph.D., Trinity College Dublin, January 2008
- Ph.D., Yale University, April 2008
- Ph.D., University of Tilburg, October 2008
- Dr.Phil., University of Leipzig, November 2008
- Doctorat d'État, Université de Provence (Aix), December 2008
- Ph.D., University of Nijmegen, April 2009
- Ph.D., University of Nijmegen, March 2010
- D.Phil., University of Cambridge, December 2011
- Ph.D., University of British Columbia, November 2012
- Ph.D., University of Bangor, March 2014
- Doctorat d'État, Université Libre de Bruxelles, April 2016
- Habilitation à diriger les recherches, University of Toulouse, November 2017
- Ph.D., Trinity College Dublin, February 2023

Major administrative roles:

- Head of Department (Theoretical and Applied Linguistics), August 2000 - July 2002 (continuing as head of subject area after the University's restructuring, August 2002 - July 2003). During the restructuring I played a major part in bringing together the departments that formed the new School of Philosophy, Psychology and Language Sciences, and continued as a member of the School Management Committee (except during the period of my Leverhulme Fellowship in 2007-08) until 2010.
- Acting Head of School (Philosophy, Psychology and Language Sciences), August 2008- June 2010. I volunteered at short notice to serve for a year when our Head of School unexpectedly moved to a higher administrative role within the University, and agreed to stay on for an additional year in the wake of further unexpected changes in senior administrative positions in the School and College.

Editorial work:

Throughout my career I have been committed to editorial work, seeing it as an important way to influence the direction of research in the field. My long association with Phonology has helped ensure its continued publication of laboratory-based research.

- Co-Editor (with Ellen Gurman Bard) of Language and Speech (1994-2000).
- Associate Editor of Phonology (1996-present). (I am one of twelve associate editors, each responsible for processing reviews of half a dozen papers each year.)
- Member of Editorial Boards: Linguistics (1985-present); Journal of Linguistics (1989-2017); Phonology (1991-1996); Journal of Phonetics (2012-present).

In addition, I regularly referee half a dozen papers a year for journals other than those listed above, including Journal of the Acoustical Society of America, Language, Phonetica, Laboratory Phonology, International Journal of American Linguistics, PLoS-1, Language Cognition and Neuroscience, Cognition, Psychological Bulletin, Speech Communication, and Language Variation and Change.

Other professional activities:

I was a member (2006-2013) of the Fachbeirat (Scientific Advisory Council) of the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics, Nijmegen. Main responsibility was participation in biennial site visits, following which we provided in-depth reports on the Institute's work directly to the President of the Max Planck Society.

From the mid-1980s until 2010 or so I regularly reviewed 2-4 research proposals a year for various funding bodies in a number of countries, especially the ESRC, AHRC, and British Academy, the US National Science Foundation, the Canadian Social Science and Humanities Research Council, and the German Research Foundation (Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft).

I have twice served as an outside reviewer for the German Research Foundation on the establishment of special research funds (Forschungsschwerpunkt), one on intonation (1981-1988) and one on laboratory phonology (2006-2012). This involved evaluating both group and individual proposals and occasional involvement with group meetings and workshops. In 2006 I also served as a panel member to evaluate proposals submitted to a special programme for funding centres of excellence ('Exzellenzinitiative') in Linguistics, Psychology and Education. In 2013 I served on a similar panel for a special research programme for the Volkswagen Foundation.

I was the outside evaluator of a major four-year interdisciplinary research programme on prosody (1998-2002), University of Geneva, January 2003, and the outside evaluator of the phonetics programme at the University of Utrecht (UiL-OTS), March 2003.

I was the co-organiser (with G. J. Docherty) of the Second Conference on Laboratory Phonology in Edinburgh in July 1989. This conference was a sequel to a conference held in June 1987 at Ohio State University and served to establish a continuing international biennial conference series. Until 1999 I remained a member of the overall organising committee. In 2010 this informal committee was superseded by a legally established Association for Laboratory Phonology, of which I was a founding member and the first President (2010-2014).

I was a member of the Scottish local organising committee for the 18th International Congress of Phonetic Sciences, which was held in Glasgow in August 2015. My principal responsibility was coordinating the evaluation of papers submitted to the conference.

Membership of scientific committees for other conferences includes:

- ESCA Workshop on Prosody, Lund, September 1993
- ESCA Workshop on Speech Synthesis, Mohonk NY, September 1994
- Sixth International Conference on Speech and Language Processing (ICSLP), Sydney, November 1998
- 14th International Congress of Phonetic Sciences (ICPhS), San Francisco, August 1999
- Between Stress and Tone, Leiden, June 2005
- Phonetics and Phonology in Iberia, Braga, Portugal, June 2007
- Tone and Intonation in Europe (TIE3), Lisbon, September 2008
- Tone and Intonation in Europe (TIE2014), Leiden, September 2014
- Workshop on Sound Change (WSC4), Edinburgh, April 2017

INVITED PRESENTATIONS

1. Invited talks at conferences and workshops:

- 'On Intonational Universals', International Symposium on the Cognitive Representation of Speech, Edinburgh, August 1979.
- 'Intonational Universals and the Representation of Intonation', Sloan Foundation Workshop on Intonation, Stanford, March 1980.
- 'Phonetic Evidence for the Hierarchical Representation of Stress', Workshop on Phonology, Cornell, July 1981.
- 'Peak Features and Overall Slope', European Psycholinguistics Association Workshop on Prosody, Paris, April 1982.
- 'Metrical Representation of Pitch Register', First Conference on Laboratory Phonology, Columbus, Ohio, June 1987.
- 'The Unity of Pitch Phonology', The Philological Society (London), October 1987.
- 'One Word's Strength is Another Word's Weakness', 7th Eastern States Conference on Linguistics (ESCOL), Columbus, Ohio, September 1990.
- 'Constraints on the Gradient Variability of Pitch Range', Third Conference on Laboratory Phonology, Los Angeles, June 1991.
- 'Integrating Syntagmatic and Paradigmatic Aspects of Stress', Semi-Plenary Symposium on 'Prosody in Situations of Communication', 12th International Congress of Phonetic Sciences, Aix-en-Provence, August 1991.
- 'Woher Downstep? Prosodische Struktur der Registersteuerung', 4. Wuppertaler linguistisches Kolloquium, Wuppertal, November 1991.
- 'Current Theories of Prosody: An Introductory Sketch', International Symposium on Japanese Prosody and its Education, Nara, Japan, November 1992.
- 'Notes on the Phonology of Prominence', ESCA Workshop on Prosody, Lund, Sweden, September 1993.
- 'Focus on the Nucleus: Evidence for the distinction between nuclear and non-nuclear accents', One-Day Workshop on Tone, Stress, and Intonation, University of Oxford, June 1995.
- "'Linear" and "Overlay" Descriptions: An Autosegmental-Metrical Middle Way', [invited contribution to a 1/3-plenary symposium on intonational structure at the 13th International Congress of Phonetic Sciences, Stockholm, August 1995; published in proceedings, but not presented because I was unable to attend conference for personal reasons].
- 'On the place of the Phrase Tone in intonational phonology', one-day workshop on phonology, LSA Summer Institute, Cornell University, July 1997.
- 'Phrase accents in a general model of intonational phonology in the European languages', three-day workshop on accent, focus, and intonation, Schloss Freudental, Germany, March 1998.
- 'Phonetic vs. phonological accounts of intonational variation: the case of F0 alignment'. Working group on Prosody, 24th annual meeting of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Sprachwissenschaft, Mannheim, February 2002.

- 'Alignment of pitch and segments: current phonetic research and its relevance to teaching intonation in a foreign language', Onzième Colloque de Villetaneuse sur l'Anglais Oral: La Prosodie, Villetaneuse, France, March 2002.
- "'Contrastive phones" in Surface Representation', Eighth Conference on Laboratory Phonology, Yale University, June 2002.
- 'Quelques problèmes phonologiques dans la synthèse de la prosodie', Prosody Colloquium, University of Geneva, September 2002.
- 'Phonological and Phonetic Factors in F0 alignment: a Review of the Evidence.' European Science Foundation Workshop on 'Experimental Approaches to Tone and Intonation', Oxford, April 2003.
- 'How to say sensible things about the semantics of focus without saying silly things about the phonology of intonation (and vice-versa)'. GLOW Workshop on information structure in generative theory vs. pragmatics, Lund, Sweden, April 2003.
- 'Phonological conditioning of F0 target alignment'. Semi-plenary workshop at the 15th International Congress of Phonetic Sciences, Barcelona, August 2003.
- 'Alignment allophony and the European 'pitch accent' languages'. European Science Foundation Workshop 'Tone and Intonation in Europe', Santorini, September 2004.
- 'Phonetic and pragmatic factors in designing experimental material for research on prosody'. Workshop on Experimental Prosody Research, Leipzig, October 2004.
- 'Alignement phonétique des contours intonatifs: allophonie et représentation lexicale'. Seventh annual meeting of the Réseau Français de Phonologie, Aix-en-Provence, June 2005.
- 'Coordination of pitch movements and segments: what does it tell us about phonology?'. Second conference on Phonetics and Phonology in Iberia (PaPI), Barcelona, June 2005.
- 'Genetic influences on tonogenesis and the geographical distribution of tone languages' (with Dan Dediu). Workshop on 'Tone: Mind, Brain, Evolution', University of Konstanz, October 2005.
- 'Alignment of tonal targets: 30 years on'. Symposium in honour of Gösta Bruce, Lund, January 2007.
- 'What would recursion look like in phonology?' International Conference on Recursion in Human Language, Illinois State University, April 2007.
- 'Can gradient phonetic distinctions convey categorical pragmatic ones?' Conference on Experimental and Theoretical Advances in Prosody, Cornell University, April 2008.
- 'Phonological equivalence of pitch level in speech'. Conference on Music, Language and the Mind, Tufts University, July 2008.
- 'Segmental analogies for intonational gradience'. Third conference on Tone and Intonation in Europe (TIE3), University of Lisbon, September 2008.
- 'What's to the right of the arrow? Formal and phonetic properties of prosodic structure'. Nineteenth International Symposium on Theoretical and Applied Linguistics (ISTAL-19), University of Thessaloniki, April 2009.
- 'Systematic phonetics and phonological theory'. Special session on the history of phonological theory, Seventeenth Manchester Phonology Meeting (mfm17), May 2009.
- 'Segmental analogies for intonational gradience'. Thirteenth Australasian Conference on Speech Science and Technology, Melbourne, December 2010.
- Invited participant (no formal papers allowed) at 5-day Strüngmann Foundation Forum on 'Language, Music and the Brain', Frankfurt, May 2011.
- 'Individual differences in pitch perception: Implications for language'. Symposium in honour of Carlos Gussenhoven, University of Nijmegen, September 2011.

- 'Singing in Tone Languages: An introduction to the kinds of things we might expect to find'. Workshop on Relationships of Speech Tone and Music, Vienna, July 2012.
